Getting to Blenheim

Auckland and Christchurch are the main International Airports for New Zealand. Wellington, only has International flights from Australia.

From Auckland which is the furthest away you could;

Train; on the scenic “Northern Explorer” , this runs 3 time a week and takes 11 hours. <http://www.kiwirailscenic.co.nz/northern-explorer/>

Fly; to Wellington, being main centres the flights are reasonably priced.

Have a look on <http://www.airnewzealand.co.nz> which does most of the flights to Blenheim and check <http://grabaseat.co.nz/> online fare finder for special deals.

Bus; <https://www.intercity.co.nz/> there are others as well.

Rental vehicles; <http://www.aatravel.co.nz/> is our Automobile Association and has maps, travel times, things to see and do as well as links to rental firms and accommodation guides. Auckland to Wellington is 658 km's, over 9 hours driving

From Wellington you can;

Take a flight to the provincial airport at Blenheim which will probably cost as much or more than the flight from Auckland. 41 Club will transfer you from there to Blenheim.

Or go on the Inter Islander Ferry <https://www.interislander.co.nz/> across Cook Strait and through the beautiful Queen Charlotte Sound to Picton, from where you will be transferred to Blenheim by the 41 Club.

From Christchurch you can;

Fly; to Blenheim, once again expensive. See above for details

Train; <http://www.kiwirailscenic.co.nz/coastal-pacific> that leaves Christchurch at 7:00 in the morning and arrives in Blenheim 11:45, not the cheapest but a lovely trip.

Bus; <https://www.intercity.co.nz/> Leaves twice a day, 7:00am & 4:00pm and takes around 4 hours 45 min's. Approx half the price of train and have special deals.

<http://www.atomictravel.co.nz/> cheaper still, but more backpacker style.

Rental vehicles; connect up with others and hire a vehicle.

<http://www.aatravel.co.nz/> is our Automobile Association and has maps, travel times, things to see and do as well as links to rental firms and accommodation guides. Drive time to Blenheim from Christchurch (308 km's) is 4 & ½ hours.
